China might with advantage take a lesson from the example of her neighbours. Japan has adopted not only the scientific and mechanical appliances of the West, but has reorganised her administrition, and is now treated by the European Powers as standing on a different plane had been appointed Captain Superintendent of from that occupied by China. Siam, too, is making progress. The capital city, Bangkok, is served by an excellent tramway, talking of introducing back gharries to Hong-kong. With rickshas and omnibuses to contend with the prospect of the gharries receiving sufholders and greatly conduces to the public ficient patronage to make them pay is not very convenience; the King a few weeks ago turned the first sod of a small railway to be constructed by private enterprise, and the tenders for the first state, railway were opened the proaching China from Tonkin and through Burmah, and the great Siberian line is now under-construction. China herself has felt compelled by the force of circumstances to recognise the expediency of introducing rail. ways and already the Kaiping line in the North is in successful operation and is being extended to Shan-bai-kwan. This line owes its existence to the foresight and energy of ITALIAN AND AMERICAN MARBLE | LI HUNG-CHANG, who, opposed as he is to the presence of foreigners in the country, is fully sensible of the advantages of foreign appliances. But with all the weight of men like La Hung-chang given in favour of pro. before it for the greation of a new line of cargo gress hindrances are placed in the way by and passenger steamers which shall carry the the defective system of administration and the conflicting interests of individual officials.
